Global growth will be a priority in the world's programs

Economists are asking questions about the options for institutions and individuals in the coming year on economic issues such as investment, education and employment, as well as on the proposed and expected options for economic policies. It may be difficult to provide an adequate answer to these questions, but there is a lot of information available, from which predictable trends for growth, markets and technology can be predicted. For the developed economies, the year 2017 was characterized by clear contradictions, as expressed by Michael Spins in Project Syndicate, where many of these economies experienced an increase in economic growth with local and international social and political turmoil and tension. Therefore, it is not unlikely in the long run that the economic situation In these countries with political and social tensions, but markets or the economy are not yet paying attention to these political and social tensions, and short-term risks seem simple.>>ail alaraisi

Rich biodiversity sets Oman's Masirah Island apart

Abundance of fish varieties, crustaceans, molluscs and a variety of terrestrial, marine and bird species, make it one of the most important environmental and tourist sites in the Sultanate. The island has the second largest gathering in the world and the largest gathering in the Indian Ocean of the Loggerhead Turtle where about 30 to 60 thousand turtles nest annually. There are two more types of turtles, the Olive Turtle that put its eggs on the shores of Masirah Island in numbers up to 150 turtles annually, and the Hawksbill Turtle, which nestles on Masirah Island and the Dimaniyat Islands. Their gathering in the Sultanate is considered the largest in the world, with 500 to 1,500 eggs per year while the Green Turtle nestles on most of Masirah beaches, but in small numbers compared to its largest gathering at Ras Al Hadd. A report published by the Ministry of Environment and Climate Affairs said that the Sultanate has made many efforts to preserve and protect its sea turtles. It has also taken the lead in many aspects related to the management of the turtle's habitats. According to the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), the turtles nesting in Oman are all at risk, and the Dimaniyat are more vulnerable to the critically endangered category. The Sultanate has shouldered this responsibility as the most important place among the countries of the region for nesting sea turtles, particularly the Loggerhead Turtle, the Green Turtle, and the Hawksbill Turtle. The Sultanate was the first to survey and count the turtles on its shores, and to carry out an ambitious long-term marine turtle breeding programme in Oman. With its unique geographical location, Masirah Island is an important place for birds watching and studying birds, where large numbers of birds, namely herons, flamingos, gulls and Barn Swallow, as well as migratory birds coming from the Arabian Peninsula, India, Pakistan and other birds of the east Africa, the plains of Siberia, and Europe. Dr. Hamad bin Mohammed al-Ghailani, Director of Community Affairs and Environmental Awareness at the Environment Society of Oman (ESO) told Oman News Agency (ONA) that the eastern sea of Masirah Island is an important site for Humpback Whale, which is believed to be a type of humpback whale separated from other species around the world. It is considered the most common type of whale found in the Sultanate (estimated at 200 whales). In the same location; (north-east of Masirah Sea), there is a kind of dolphins, called Bottlenose Dolphins. The small island of "Marsis," which is located in the western part of the middle of the Masirah Island, one of the most important areas where the breeding of sea birds, especially during the autumn seasonal tours, including Sooty Gulls, Roseate Tern. There are varieties of birds that visit the island and belong to the birds of India, South Asia. "This huge and unique diversity of the island requires a different view of the future human, urban, tourism and economic activity, the protection of important environmental sites, the reduction of human pressure on them and classify them as a natural reserve," Dr. Al Ghailani said. Masirah Island is about 640 square kilometers, 95 kilometers long. It is separated from the east coast of the Sultanate by Masirah Bay, which is 10 to 15 miles wide.

What is makeup for women

The more she feels beautiful inside and out, the more self-confident she is, the more the psychologist insists. Make-up for women is not a luxury they spend a lot of money on, their weapon to fight time markers and beauty tools. From the outside, it may be a real crisis for many women because they are provocative goods that can be easily dispensed with. However, it is one of the essentials that plays a major role in the lives of women and their presence is much more important than all the basics of life. Although it has a charming effect on the psyche of women, but there is another effect of make-up on the side of women. The report says that make-up stimulates three senses, first touch, which is achieved by touching the surface of the body, and the smell of cosmetics that stimulate the sense of "smell" and then stimulate the "sight" and is through the transformation created by make-up in the face, This positive stimulation of the senses reflected on the psychological well, where women feel pleasure in doing, according to research conducted by the site on a group of women, they found that women resort to the use of makeup for different motives, most important was for psychological reasons, and that plays a large role in their lives and gives them Self-confidence, as well as able to turn their faces to the most beautiful and insulting B. The report adds that psychological medicine confirms that make-up magic effect on women, it is able to give them the confidence lost, and also feel happy, because the colors used in both red lips or even shades of the eyes reflected on the psyche of women, especially if the colors are exhilarating, That make-up gives women happiness because it contributes to change the shape of the outside for the better, and is able to change their negative feelings to the best every time they resort to the use of cosmetics to overcome the psychological crisis.
